AND STOP AT KLAMATH FALLS

WE NEED IT

A SUGAR BEET factory, such as the Klamath Chamber of Commerce is trying to secure for Klamath Falls, not only manufactures a staple article here, thus keeping up a part of the payroll, but it also provides a new money bringing crop for the Klamath farmer in the production of the beets necessary for maintaining the plant.

On another page will be found a number of articles relating to sugar beet production. One of these, by a United States soil expert, tells the wonderful possibilities of sugar beet culture here, and another, written by a local divine, who is well versed in farming and who is a keen student of economics, shows us that the European war has cut off a large percentage of the world's beet sugar production—which must be met for at least ten years more by the United States. During all that time, sugar will bring a good price, and in the ten years, by proper methods of publicity, etc., there ought to be no great difficulty in making sugar raised here at a premium in the United States.

Another feature that has not been touched upon as yet is the value of the sugar beet to dairying even after the sugar is extracted therefrom. The pulp forms a nutritious food for all sorts of livestock, and is sold cheaply for this purpose.

A sugar factory would be a great benefit for Klamath county. The people should get behind the Chamber of Commerce, now that a prospective manufacturer has been invited here, and secure this addition to the payroll and this additional market for farm products.

Scattered Shots

"WE CAN'T EVER get a sugar factory," we suppose will be in order from a very few now. No. Not if we depend upon these people.

THE UNITED STATES tests convince us that the Klamath beet can't be beat.

THESE ARE the days that start us a-hankering to go fishing.

ONE THING YOU can't help noticing is that Main street has been swept.

THE MAIN DIFFERENCE between a crop of dead beets and a crop of sugar beets is that you are money out by cultivating the former, and money ahead on the latter.

WOMEN ESTABLISH KITCHEN FOR POOR

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Two of the richest women in New York have established a public kitchen for the sale at cost of freshly cooked food to be taken home for family use by New York's poor, and have agreed to finance it for a year. The kitchen is at Twenty-seventh street and Sixth avenue. Others are to be established, it is this proves a success.

A bill of fare that will include soups at two cents, stews at four cents, dinner and supper at five cents each. Mrs. James A. Burden and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., are the sponsors for the movement and will pay the expenses. The Association for the Improvement for the Poor has the matter in hand.

URGES "WOMAN'S PARTY" TO END WAR

Miss SUSANNA COCROFT

More than a thousand leading women of the United States, assembled at the nation's capitol, have united in an effort to end war among civilized nations forever. The organization, known as the "Woman's Peace Party," is based on the idea that man's efforts for peace have been a failure for over 500 years.

The message flashed across the country from the meeting is that "the greatest price Europe is going to have to pay is not even in the lives of men she is now giving, but the blasted lives of generations yet unborn."

These were the words of Miss Susanna Cocroft, the well known health advocate of Chicago. Miss Cocroft has a following of more than 70,000 women throughout the world. It was on account of her work for the upbuilding of womanhood that she has been summoned to assist in the woman's peace movement.

"No nation is greater than the strength of its mothers," says Miss Cocroft, in her plea to American womanhood. "During the past fifteen years I have been devoting my time to building up the mental and physical strength of womankind all over the world and the point which most strongly interests me is the effect of this war upon the health of this and of the future generation. No nation is greater than the strength of its individual members.

Kaiser Knows It

"No ruler knows this better than Kaiser Wilhelm. Yet with the emperor's keen insight he knows it is not the foods eaten, but those which the body appropriates to its need by digestion and assimilation which counts, and the body use of nourishment is controlled almost entirely by the nervous system. Think what this means to the mothers and sisters consumed with anxiety for their sons, husbands and brothers in the trenches.

"Worry, hatred, anxiety and fear must be the consuming thought of the mothers and sisters of Europe today. These are eating at the very heart of national strength. Our mothers and sisters across the sea have little heart for food. Their

Life in Trenches Described in Vivid Manner by Officers

Another Truce or Two Like Christmas, Would Put an End to Hostilities, According to Man Just Out of the Mudholes

By WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD (United Press Staff Correspondent)

CALAIS Jan. 26.—(By mail to New York)—His American rubber boots and his clothes were caked in the mud of the trenches, and you could smell horse, gasoline and gun powder, when he entered the compartment of the train. He was a human whirl straight from the battle lines, and he was so delighted with the prospect of his six-day leave of absence that in spite of being an English major, and therefore, one of the most silent men on earth he wanted to talk.

Major Shepherd

He began about the weather, and from that, shifted to the mud in the trenches.

"These American rubber boots are the only things to keep out the water," he said. ("Unders" is the English name for rubber boots.) "The only trouble with them is that sometimes the water in the trenches is so deep that it overtops the unders and you slosh around with them full of mud and water. They ought to come up to your hips."

Recognizes Worry

"Emperor Wilhelm himself is demonstrating the effect of worry on his own health. He is a keen student and he knows well that he should avoid worry, fear, jealousy and hatred, as he would avoid contagious diseases.

"While jealousy, fear, anger, and hatred effect disastrously the health of a nation, their opposites, sympathy, kindness, love and goodness, build up the nerves and strengthen the health. One great good to American womanhood brought about by this war, is the building of health and life through generous giving. Not the giving of money but of sympathy and love—and giving of self. As we give, so do we grow, physically and spiritually. While we would not in any means bring about anything by which we might gain by our sister's suffering, this impulse of life, to generosity, will help to construct the lives of the women in America today. Every good impulse checked is a crime against itself.

"There is coming a great spiritual awakening among our women. Let us support it not only for the sake of the sisters abroad, but for the sake of the women here. We are learning that God answers prayer for human-kind through human-kind.

"As far as in us lies, let th eprayer of our suffering sisters be answered by the great power working through us. In the opportunity to help our sisters across the seas, let us lose sight of self and give of ourselves to suffering humanity."

and had to be careful of their eating before they were sent into the trenches, find, after a week or two, that their stomachs become fine and strong. They can eat anything and as much as they want. They don't get much exercise, but the open air life makes new men of them. "You see, really we are in winter quarters. So are the Germans. I don't suppose the generals of either side intended that there should be any lull in the fighting this winter, but nature had its way. We could not fight if we wanted to. I've been in an important part of the line and we haven't done any real fighting for six weeks.

"It's a wonderful sight, though—the trench country. All you can see is barbed wire fences. The trenches are so well made that you can't distinguish anything even from a short distance. There is utter silence most of the time. It is at night that we have lively times. Each side is expecting the other to pour out of the trenches and make an attack; the situation is always very tense in the darkness.

"I'm not saying that men don't go to sleep, but there are lookouts whose nerves are strained to high 'C' all the time. The slightest movement of any sort in the direction of the enemy's trenches sets the outlook firing. It may only be a weed stirring in the wind, but that is enough for him.

"The men jump and begin firing immediately, whether they see anything or not. The firing runs down the trench, something four miles. This is because we are afraid the Germans may rush from their trenches and charge us.

"Then the Germans wake up. They are afraid that all the noise means that we are charging them. They match us making noise; they shoot in the darkness, even though they see nothing.

"This may go on for ten or fifteen minutes and then an astonishing thing happens: a great bomb of white light explodes between the two trenches. That is a bomb of good cheer, even if the enemy did not see whether we were charging or not. And it always means that the Germans are not charging. "Let's quit firing and go to sleep," is what the German white bomb tells us, or what our white bomb may tell the Germans. And the firing gradually dies out; silence falls again in the trenches, and it is not until dawn that we really begin shooting again.

"I have never been able to explain the shooting at daylight. It always opens up, whether the other start it or not. The men do it themselves. I suppose, perhaps they do it to make good with their officers for what's going to happen at 7 o'clock. "What does happen at 7 o'clock?" "Well, they all stop fighting and breakfast is over. One man after another lays down his rifle and begins to eat the food that has been brought him via the communicating trenches. And you can't hear any shooting until 8 o'clock, for the eating and smoking.

"These English and German soldiers know each other by face and even by name. The astonishing thing is that they don't hate each other. You can't keep up that feeling of blind hatred between the trenches. You know that Christmas truce was a bad thing for the soldiers from a military standpoint."

Then the major said an astonishing thing: "If you wanted to end this war, all you have to do would be to let the men have another truce of the like that Christmas one. They'd get to talking to each other and suddenly they'd decide that the whole business was a—foolishness, and they'd put down their guns and go back home."

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

SAYS WE MUST KEEP FEET DRY. AVOID EXPOSURE AND EAT LESS MEAT

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well. (Paid Advertisement)

You ride on Velvet when you ride on Diamonds That's true in a double sense

In the first place the records of Diamond Service for 1914 show that more than 99% of the many thousands of Diamond Tires sold lasted much longer—went much farther—than the guarantee called for.

More than 99% of the hundreds of thousands of Diamond Tires in use last year gave more mileage than the purchasers paid for.

Every mile beyond that which the buyer expected was velvet for him.
